

CONEY SALOONS OPEN ALL NIGHT MARDI GRAS WEEK

Acting Mayor Kline Grants 22
Permits for One Week,
Beginning To-Night.

CLOSED LAST YEAR.

Mayor Gaynor Announced Then
There Should Be No Carous-
ing During Festivities.

The Coney Island Mardi Gras will be wide open all night this year. Acting Mayor Adolph L. Kline began his duties as temporary city executive to-day by signing twenty-two all night licenses to hotels and cafes and "hot-dog" restaurants at Coney Island for the festivities which began to-night. The wholesale extension of night permits came after ten days' activities about the City Hall by Coney Island hotel keepers, some of whom walked in the Gaynor notification parade and others of whom got about the leather cushions in the Mayor's office. All of the applicants are for Mayor Gaynor's re-election.

The places granted licenses, which expire next Saturday night, include every prominent liquor establishment on the island, except that of Fred Henderson.
Those signed by Mr. Kline to-day are:
Charles L. Feldman, Louis Stauch,
George W. Schwabert, Morris Goldberg, James W. Stuenkel, Imbalia
Rosenberg, Charles Fajeta, John Marshall, George Gassman, Frank Kas-
per, George S. Scoville, Fred Pariser, Edgar Hotel Company, Bulzer Amusement Company, John J. Bassett, Indiana Hotel, Raffaele Penna, Charles J. Wendelken, Ella Blank, Joseph Mc-Carroll, New Seaboard Hotel, Kaiser
Garten, Walsh Hotel and Majestic Hotel.

One year ago when the cafe, restaurant and hotel keepers called on Mayor Gaynor and applied for all night licenses during the Mardi Gras the Mayor wrote:

GAYNOR REFUSED LICENSES

LAST YEAR AT MARDI GRAS.
"Let those who cannot avoid liquor though by 1 o'clock remain away from the Mardi Gras. We do not want any all night carousings at Coney Island.
My experience is that proprietors down there had better cater to good, decent people who do not want to stand up all night."

The Vandewater Hotel, opposite the City Park and Municipal Baths, will continue to sell liquor all night under its annual all night permit. This is the only cafe on the island which has an all night license.

Acting Mayor Kline was asked how he came to grant so many licenses. In view of the fixed statement of Mayor Gaynor. Mr. Kline said:
"In granting these licenses I was assured that Mayor Gaynor himself had stated before he went away that licenses would be granted to those who had applied. Furthermore, I informed Mr.
Frederick Lundy, who came to me in behalf of the applicants, that the police would watch these places closely, and the licenses would be revoked if law and order did not prevail. I have transmitted to the Police Commissioner a list of the places to which licenses have been granted and in addition I have instructed him this morning to compel the Coney Island resorts to live up to the strict letter of the law this week."

WIFE OF A SURGEON AT WAR WITH LIQUOR MAN

Mrs. Barth Complains That Speer
Sold Whiskey to Husband
After Warning Notice.

Because of his defiance of a written order served upon him by a wife, forbidding him to sell liquor to her husband, Max Speer, a saloon keeper was summoned to Gates Avenue police court in Brooklyn to-day to answer to a charge of violation of the liquor law. Speer, whose place of business is at No. 635 Knickerbocker Avenue, asked Magistrate Walsh for an adjournment and the hearing went over to Sept. 13.

The complainant is Mrs. Catherine Barth, wife of Otto Barth, a retired surgeon in the United States Navy, who draws a pension of $1,800 a year. Mrs.
Barth, finding her husband seriously diseased, employed a private detective to shadow him for several days previous to July 15. The detective reported that Barth visited Speer's saloon three times a day and took five or six drinks at each visit. Mrs. Barth then commissioned Frank Geiger to serve upon Speer the usual form of notice provided for by the liquor law.

Geiger served the notice in the presence of a witness on the night of July 26. Barth was in the saloon at the time. Speer, according to Geiger, laughingly tossed the notice to Barth and set up the drinks to the house, including Barth.

"If my wife did anything like that," said Speer, according to Geiger, "I'd kick her in the cellar and turn the hose on her until she jumped out the window."

Other drinks were served to Barth by Speer, according to Geiger, subsequent to the saloonkeeper's receipt of the notice.

Important Part Love Takes in Marriage; Terrible Vengeance of Cupid if Cheated

"My Husband Loved Me
and Wanted Me for His Wife," Says a Reader, and She Adds: "I Was Not in Love With Him,
but Thought Foolishly
That Love Would Come
After Marriage."

By Nixola Greeley-Smith.

"In love there is always one who kisses and one who turns the cheek." In this old French saying there lies perhaps the explanation of marriages otherwise mysterious and unaccountable. It tells the story of many women and perhaps of as many men; but it is a situation which carries with it the threat of ultimate tragedy, for in the end Love wreaks a terrible vengeance on those who attempt to cheat him with trick scales and short weights. "I married my husband because he loved me and wanted me for his wife," a married woman explains to-day in giving the reasons of her matrimonial choice. "I was not at all in love with him, but thought, foolishly, that love would come after marriage. If some times in the lonely evenings after the last noisy romper has gone to rest," she adds, "it sit and dream of one who is dark, brave and handsome, with whom life would be one grand dream of Arcadia, I feel no disloyalty to my husband, as he will never know."

It is possible, of course, that marriage which begins in this way may end as happily as any other, but there are serious chances that it will prove otherwise.

There is the romantic idea that the woman who marries without love cheats her husband. But she does worse than that—she cheats herself. There are numbers of men who can be and are happy with women who do not love them; men who accept so wholeheartedly the notion of woman as a chattel that they would no more worry about her emotions than they would waste time in wondering whether or not a beefsteak or a dish of corned beef and cabbage returned their esteem. But no woman can be happy in marriage while she carries about in her mind the vision of a dream hero, whether he is dark and brave, or blond and poetic. So long as she does not meet him—the dream hero—is useless to tell her that life is not "one grand, sweet dream of Arcadia," with anybody. Dream heroes will not down, unless you marry them, nor dream heroines, either. That is why love remains the best reason for marriage and what makes every human being realize the subtle truth of Andrew Lang's poem beginning:

"Who wins his love shall lose her,
Who loses her shall gain."

You simply have to win her in order to lose her. If you marry some one else you are bound to keep up the search for her. Scooting an ideal is as ineffectual as scooting a snake. You have to marry her if you want to be sure that there are no dream heroines this side of dreams, but plenty of charming, sweet, imperfect women. And, of course, the same thing applies to the dream here.

"The road lies long and straight and dusty to the grave," wrote Stevenson of the way of matrimony, and husbands and wives need all the love there is to see them safely over its rough places. I suppose the dream hero mentioned by "A Consistent Wife" might seem as harmless an illusion as the belief in Santa Claus, except for the fact that it is not worth any one's while to counterfeits Santa Claus, and almost any man wants to be a dream hero once and a while. Here is her letter:

MARRIED HER HUSBAND BE-CAUSE HE WANTED HER.
Dear Madam: I married my husband because he loved me and wanted me for his wife. I was not at all in love with him, but thought, foolishly, that love would come to me after marriage.

Years of "sunshine and shadow" have passed since then, lovely children have come into our home and our married life has been in many ways ideally happy.

If, sometimes in the lonely evenings after the last noisy romper has gone to rest, I sit and dream of one who is dark, brave and handsome, with whom life would be one grand dream of Arcadia, I feel no disloyalty to my husband, as he "will never know" and will probably go on in the dream of our lives.

ELEPHANT HATTIE "SKIES" CUBIST ART RIGHT OFF THE BAT

Bangs Canvas to Bits Across Park Pilings at First Glimpse of Portrait.

Hattie, the big elephant in Central Park, has set her stamp of disapproval on the cubist art. A long-haired alleged artist wandered into the Arsenal yesterday, where Head Keeper Bill Snyder was cutting meat for the lions, and told him that he wanted to paint something big in the park. Bill led him out to the lions.

"What?" he said.
"What?" he said. "What's the matter with you?"

"Do you think I want to paint those cubists? I want something sublime." "Umph!" grunted the head keeper, and led Hattie out to her enclosure. The artist, with a gleam of satisfaction, set up his easel outside the rails.

"Is that sublime enough for you?" asked Bill.

"The artist said that nothing was too sublime for cubist art and began to mix his drabs." Bill left and a crowd gathered to watch the artist at work. "Say, Mister, what's that up in the corner?" piped a youngster. "Dat's de elephant's ear, Jimmy," returned another kiddy.

"Quit yer kiddin'," said Jimmy. "He's gotta make de house fra." "Oh, look at de pile of wats." "Dern't no slas. Dat's de stairs for de elephant to come down when he wants a drink."

When Snyder returned, he had to force his way through the crowd. He gazed on a lot of useless triangles, parallelograms and hen tracks.

MISS LORRAINE'S HUSBAND SURRENDERS, GOES TO CELL

Greshmer, Sought Since June for Larceny of Actress-Wife's Ring, Surprises District-Attorney.

Frederick M. Greshmer, husband of Lillian Lorraine, surrendered in District-Attorney Whitman's office to-day and was sent to the Tombs, to remain until his trial on the charge of having stolen a $5,000 diamond ring from his wife. Detective Reynolds led Greshmer before Judge Mulqueen in General Sessions, who surprised the young man by holding him without bail. Greshmer made no comment. He was not represented by counsel.

"The search for Greshmer had gone on since last June when he was indicted on his wife's charges. He and the show girl were married April 13 last, and in June Miss Lorraine told District-Attorney Whitman that on June 12, Greshmer had forced a three-stone diamond ring from her finger in her apartments at the Sherman Square Hotel and four days later had pawned it for $2,500. He sent her the pawn ticket from Atlantic City, she said.

After a week's reflection by the actress, the charge was presented to the Grand Jury and an indictment was found.

Greshmer was reported in Canada, in Detroit and in Boston, and he is said to have returned from England only a few days ago.

PHOSPHORESCENT SKIRT OUTSHINES THEM ALL

Carlisle Girl Causes a Sensation in Street With New Garment.

CARLISLE, Pa., Sept. 8.—Persons who happened to be in Main street of this city last night were astonished to see a young woman glide past in a costume which appeared to be radiant. No unusual was the spectacle, that some thought they had seen a spirit.

It was no such thing. It was Miss Daisy Beresford, a very charming and very much alive young person, wearing the latest thing in extreme styles—the "phosphorescent" skirt.

The "phosphorescent" skirt literally outshines them all. It is much like the "X-ray" and "silhouette" varieties, but in addition it glows like phosphorus. At any rate, that is the testimony of those who saw Miss Beresford pass last evening.

NURSE SAYS WIFE OF MALE ADMIRER BLACKMAILED HER

Has Woman Arrested on Charge of Extortion—Thought Man Single.

"It is a case of absolute blackmail. I had no idea that Mr. Watson was a married man until long after I met him," declared Miss Laura Van Liew to her apartment at No. 125 West Ninety-fourth street, to-day, when asked about the charge of extortion she had made against Mrs. Alice Watson, thirty-two years old, who lives in a flat on the third floor of No. 225 West One Hundred and Thirty-fourth street. Mrs. Watson was released as $200 bail in the West Side Police Court yesterday for examination next Wednesday. At her home it was said that the defendant was delirious ever since she got out of a cell, and was in no condition to talk.

A man who explained that he was a friend of the family answered the door, which he kept chained, and asserted that Mrs. Watson was innocent, and that she would prove her innocence when the case came up in court. "She has a bundle of love letters which Miss Van Liew wrote to Watson," said the man, who refused to give his name, "and she will produce these love letters before the Magistrate."

Miss Van Liew, who lives with two of her sisters, is about thirty-five years old. In her complaint she charged that Mrs. Watson tried to extort $2,500 from her on a threat to expose the unmarried woman's alleged relations with Watson, who is now in a hospital. She contends that she gave various sums, ranging from $50 to $1,000, to the woman simply out of the goodness of her heart.

She explained that when the demands became too frequent and too exorbitant she balked, and finally called in the police, who arrested the wife in Miss Van Liew's apartments.

Miss Van Liew, who is a graduate nurse, apparently has plenty of money. Her lawyer, Louis Booth, of 85, 27 Broadway, made a statement for Miss Van Liew.

MET MARRIED MAN ON STREET NEAR HER HOME.

"My client met Watson for the first time on Aug. 13 in the street in front of her residence," said the woman lawyer. He came up the street and as he approached Miss Van Liew, he smiled and lifted his hat. Miss Van Liew did not recognize him as one of her acquaintances and she was about to pass on, when Watson spoke to her. He said he knew her and mentioned the names of some of her friends in Rochester, N. Y.

"Watson requested permission to call, and said he would give references. He showed up with a letter of introduction from a friend of Miss Van Liew's in Rochester. He told my client on the occasion of his first visit that he was a single man and that he was chief electrician in one of the theatres. He kept up his visits and six weeks later a woman came to him with a letter from his wife, who told him that she was Mrs. Alice Watson, wife of the man who had been married for ten years.

"This information was a shock to my client, and she invited Mrs. Watson to call. The wife, who is a cripple and lame, went to my client's home and told a hard luck story, how Watson had mistreated her and how she was forced to take a "barker's" job at one of the amusement resorts in Fallside Park to support herself. Miss Van Liew was even more surprised to learn from the wife that all the time Watson had been calling on her and Mrs. Watson were living in an apartment in New York City. The wife was so poorly dressed that my client gave the woman some money to clothe herself becomingly, and then began Mrs. Watson's continuous begging trips. My client gave Mrs. Watson at times $50, then $100 and even $200 to help relieve the woman's alleged distress. But the demands became so frequent that Miss Van Liew called a halt and refused to give any more money. It was then that Mrs. Watson began her threats of exposure.

According to the police, Mrs. Watson asserts that she is to Miss Van Liew simply to ask for money as a care for her husband in the hospital.

CYCLIST GUS LAWSON KILLED DURING RACE

COLOGNE, Germany, Sept. 8.—Gus Lawson, the American cyclist, and Scheuermann, a German rider, are dead, and Meinholt, the German rider's pacer, is dying as the result of an accident to-day in the hundred kilometer motor-paced bicycle championship race here.

While Lawson was pacing Guignard, a Frenchman, a tire of the motorcycle burst and the racers were hurled to the bottom of the track. Lawson's skull and both arms were fractured and he was injured internally.

Lawson came here from Los Angeles where he was considered by cycling circles to have been the best pacer in the world. He was a brother of the noted cyclist, Iver Lawson, of Salt Lake City.

$43,799,500 TAX "WOULD NOT BE ROBBING ASTOR"

Senator Morris Explains His Proposition to Make Levy
on Big Inheritances.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Senator Morris, Progressive Republican, to-day in the Senate called up his tax amendment to the tariff bill proposing a tax on inheritances, graduated from 1 per cent on $5,000 up to 7 per cent, on bequests exceeding $50,000. He said it was designed to break up immense fortunes.

Senator Chapp, Progressive Republican, said he would support the amendment, although he believed the time had come when the Government should go further and not allow people of great wealth like the Astors "to take what is not belong to them from the people."

Senator Morris took the case of Vincent Astor to illustrate the effect of his amendment. The younger Astor, he said, did nothing to accumulate the fortune of $50,000,000 he received from his father.

"Under this proposed amendment," said Senator Morris, "the tax Vincent Astor would pay to the Government would be $43,799,500. He would then have more than $50,000,000 tipped into his lap, a fortune made by millions of people of the United States, a fortune for the accumulation of which he did not sweat a drop, a fortune accumulated without an effort of his hand or brain. Such a tax would not be robbing Mr. Astor."

JUST BACK FROM DERRY, GIVES $15 TO O'BRIEN

But Latter is Held in Jersey
City as a Disorderly Person.

An elderly, well-dressed and eloquent man, giving the name of John O'Brien, of Beaver Falls, Pa., was held as a disorderly person in the Criminal Court in Jersey City to-day on complaint of special officer Lavaret, of the Jersey Central Railroad, and William J. McKeever, a rich and prominent citizen of Pittsburgh. O'Brien was arrested last night in the Jersey Central terminal at Communipaw after McKeever had handed him $15.

McKeever, who was just returned from a visit to Ireland and had labels of Irish hotels pasted all over his hand baggage, was in the Communipaw terminal waiting for a train when O'Brien scooped him and asked him about the Old Sod. McKeever happened to mention that he was in Derry where upon O'Brien mentioned the names of several persons McKeever had met.

O'Brien said he was also on his way from Ireland to his home at Beaver Falls, but was unable to pay the baggage on his trunk amounting to a little less than $15. His money was all locked up in the trunk, he said. He showed a bond of $1,000 of the Southern Minnesota Railroad, and McKeever handed him $15. Then Lavaret and Policeman Doty stepped up and arrested O'Brien.

On his way to the police station O'Brien threw away the bond and said he had never owned it. He had mileage books in his pockets entitling him to 4,000 miles of transportation on various railroads.
